Passionate about Archives—
Celebrating Archives Month 2007

Historical records contain information of enduring value to all of us. They enable us to tell the stories of the past, they help us answer questions in the present, and they allow us to conduct the business of everyday life. Archivists have an important charge—to select and keep documents, photographs, sound recordings, and other records that have enduring value as reliable memories of the past.

We invite you to join the Virginia State Historical Records Advisory Board in celebrating the commonwealth's archives and archivists.
